Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Wednesday 15 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
A lot of fine weather Thursday; some rain in northwest.

This Evening and Tonight:
Showery rain, perhaps heavy, crossing northwest and then northern Scotland, with scattered showers filtering into some other western coastal areas. But most areas will be dry, with variable cloud, clear spells and light winds, leading to patchy fog beyond midnight.

Thursday:
For most of the UK, early mist and fog patches will lift before mid-morning, leaving some warm sunny spells. Northern Ireland and eventually western Scotland, turning cloudier, occasional rain developing.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Rain into the west on Friday, some heavy. Fine further east. The weekend sees further rain or showers for most, perhaps some drier weather for the west and far north.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.